Poetry.

LINES AT NEWPORT.

BY H. T. RUCKERMAN.

Between old gable rods a far
I watch the shadows on the bay,
When o'er it hangs the morning star
Orion's glow of parting day.

Like marble gleams its crystal blue
Beneath the sky's unclouded dome,
While every breeze awakes to view
A thousand crests of pearly foam.

I watch the sail across it glide
And vanish like a wing in air,
Or, mirrored in the glassy tide,
The anchored craft sway idly there.

I see the vagrant zephyr play
O'er clover bloom and twinkling grass,
Amid the poplar leaves, delay
And turn to silver as they pass.

Through clinging mists that, as a shroud,
Its mottled limbs float dimly o'er,
Like a huge spectre wrapt in cloud,
I watch the dying eyemore.

From fogy's trance awaked soon,
I hear the ancient steeple's chime,
Break on the golden bough of noon,
To summons back the thought of time.

But when the level sunbeams fling
Their rosy flush along the deep,
And to the restless spirit bring
The vigil that it loves to keep.

Then musing by the shore alone,
While near the shelving boulders rise,
I list their dreary monotone,
As, with each lapsing wave, it dies.

Or from you green and craggy height
Gaze forth upon the boundless sea,
That spreads beyond my eager sight,
The emblem of infinity.

Agriculture.

GUANO.—It is somewhat doubtful whether farmers in the interior can profitably use guano on their lands. Yet there are now grounds where teams cannot go unless in winter, when manure cannot well be applied. On such grounds it may be economical to use the powerful guano, as enough may be carried in a wheelbarrow to dress an acre.

Guano works best on moist soils, and it is best if it is mixed with loam or other matter to prevent waste on sowing. And in all cases it should be incorporated with the soil immediately after sowing. If a harrow cannot be used, a hand rake will answer.

When used on corn it is common to sow it broadcast over the field—but in your heavy soil you want something to give the corn an early start. But you must be cautous and mix a good quality of loam with the guano, or bury the guano with your soil, so as not to have it come in contact with the seed corn.

When guano is used in the hill, much care should be taken to mix other matter with it to prevent its injuring the young plants. Or the guano may be first buried in the furrow, and then the seed may be dropped, not to come in contact with the seed that is blown away.

SAVE THE DEAD LEAVES.—If every

agriculturist would reflect for a moment

on the nature of fallen leaves, which contain not only the vegetable matter, but the earthy salts, lime, potash &c., needed for the next season's growth—and that, too, exactly in the proportion required by the very tree and plant from which they fall;

then, more, if they would consider that it is peculiarly in this way, by the decomposition of these very fallen leaves, that nature enriches the soil year after year, in her great forests, would scarcely be possible for such a reflecting horticulturist to allow these leaves to be swept away by every wind that blows, and finally lost altogether.

A wise horticulturist will diligently collect,

from week to week, the leaves that fall under each tree, and by digging them under the soil about the roots, where they will soil and enrich that soil, provide in the cheapest manner the best possible food for that tree. In certain vineyards in France, the vines are kept in the highest condition

by simply burying at their roots every leaf and branch that is yanked off such wines, or that falls from them at the end of the season.—Horticulturist.

"Our account!" was the surprised reply.
"Surely the term has not yet expired."

"Only half of it, but my present relief is to collect money at that time. It is a pain which many tradesmen have adopted of late."

"I am not aware that there had been any change in your rates, and I have made arrangements to meet your bill at the usual time. I fear that it will not be in my power to do so now."

The companion of the teacher showed great disappointment, and as she passed on in a different direction, she muttered to herself :

"Just as I expected, I never shall see a cent. Every body says they are going down hill. I must get rid of the children in some way. Perhaps I may get a pair of shoes or two for payment for the half-quarter, if I manage right, but it will never do go on in this way."

A little discomposed by her interview with the teacher, Mrs. Thompson stepped into a neighboring grocery to purchase some trifling articles of family stores.

"I have a little account" against you.—Will it be convenient for Mr. Thompson to settle this evening?" asked the polite shopkeeper, as he produced the desired articles.

"Is it its usual time for settling?" was again the surprised enquiry.

"Well, not exactly, but money is very tight just now, and I am anxious to get all that is due me. In future I intend to keep short accounts; there is a little bill, if you would like to look at it. I will call around this evening. It is but a small affair."

"Thirty dollars is no small affair to us just now," and she thoughtfully pursued her way homewards.

"It seems strange that all these payments must be met just now, while we are struggling to recover from the heavy expenses of the winter. I cannot understand it."

Her perplexity was increased by finding her husband with two bills in his hand, and a countenance expressive of anxiety and concern.

"Lock Mary," he said, as she entered, "there are two accounts out for money—one from the doctor and one from the dealer in leather from whom I purchased my last stock. They are both very urgent for immediate payment, although they have always been willing to wait a few months until I could make arrangements to meet their claims. But misfortunes never come single, and if a man once gets behindhand, trouble seems to pour in upon him."

"Just as I expected," exclaimed uncle Joshua, rubbing his hand exultingly, as the grateful shoemaker called upon him at the expiration of his visit.

"Well, just as I expected. I am a strange world! They are ready to push a man up hill if he seems to be ascending, and just as ready to push him down, if they find that his face is turned that way. In future neighbor Thompson, let everything around you wear an air of prosperity, and you will be sure to prosper!" And with a satisfied air, Uncle Joshua placing his money in his pocket book, ready to meet some other claim upon his benevolence, whilst he whom he befriended, with a light step and cheerful countenance, returned to his happy home.

"The butcher's account as I live!" uttered the astonished shoemaker. "What is to be done, Mary! So much money to be paid out and very little coming in; for some of my best customers have left me, although my work has always given satisfaction. If I could only have as much employment as usual, and the usual credit allowed, I could soon satisfy all these claims; but to meet them now is impossible, and the acknowledgement of inability would send us still on the downward path."

"We must do our best and trust in Providence," was the consoling remark of his wife, as a second knock at the door aroused the fear that another claimant was about to appear.

But the benevolent countenance of Uncle Joshua, a rare, but ever welcome visitor, presented itself. Seating himself in the comfortable chair that Mary hastened to hand him, he said in his eccentric, but friendly manner :

"Well, good folks, I understand the world is very great even when it is chastened.—But Jehovah was formerly nearer to us, and we are told that he is now more accessible to us than ever."

"True, but that was in the days of her prosperity. I cannot afford to run any risk."

The entrance of Mrs. Thompson prevented further conversation.

She was evidently surprised at the refusal of Mrs. B. to do any work for her; but a great pressure of business, was pleaded as an excuse, there was nothing to be said, and she soon took her leave. Another application proved equally unsuccessful. It was strange how busy the village dressmakers had suddenly become.

On the way home, the poor shoemaker's wife met the teacher of a small school in the neighborhood, where two of her children attended.

"Ah! Mrs. Thompson I am glad to see you," was the salutation. "I was about calling to your house. Would it be convenient to settle our little account this afternoon?"

"A miracle which is very easy wrought, I imagine, my good friend. What is the amount of your debt which press so heavily upon you, and how soon, in the common course of events, could you discharge them?"

"They do not exceed one hundred dollars," replied the shoemaker; "and with my usual run of work, I could make all right in three or four months."

"We will say six!" was the answer. "I will advance you one hundred and sixty dollars for six months. Pay every day, owe, and with the remainder of the money make some slight improvement in your shop or house, and put everything about the grounds in its usual neat order. Try this plan for a few weeks, and we will see what effect it has upon worthy neighbors. No, no, never mind thanking me. I am only trying a little experiment on human nature. I know you of old, and have no doubt my money is safe in your hands."

Weeks passed by. The advice of Uncle Joshua had been strictly followed, and the change in the shoemaker's prospects was indeed wonderful. He was now spoken of as one of the most thriving men in the village, and many marvelous stories were told to account for the sudden alteration in his affairs.

"I tell you what," said the parson,

"I've got three daughters, and very nice girls they are, I assure you. Suppose you come and dine with me next market-day —you will meet them at the table; and if any one of them should prove the 'inevitable she' you are in search of, I shall not be backward to do my part as far as I can."

"Agreed," said the youth. "I'll come, as sure as you're alive, if you say nothing about it to the ladies."

"That shall be a bargain. On Saturday next, then, we shall see you at dinner at five." They went round until they got to a pleasant spring above the great bridge, where they landed; and near to which both he and Angell lived to old age.

Backus's Hist. of the Bapts. p. 74.

About the time that Mr. Williams came to Providence, William Blackston settled in what is now the State of R. I.

These and such like proceedings caused the removal of Mr. Wm. Blaxton about this time. He was minister in the church of England, but came early to this country. It appears by Johnson's history, p. 20, that he was here in 1628, but not agreeing with Mr. Endicot and others about church affairs, he turned himself to agriculture. He had planted himself upon the neck of land where Boston now stands, which from him was called Blaxton's Point, when the Massachusetts company first arrived with their charter. At a court in Boston, April 1, 1633, they made him a grant of fifty acres of land near his house there, [Mass. Records.]—

Yet now he said, "I came from England, because I did not like the Lord Bishops; but I cannot join with you, because I would not be under the Lord Brethren."

"My capital," said the wooper, "is three thousand pounds, and I want a thousand more—and I must have it."

"I will give you a thousand with the eldest girl."

"No; the charming Nelly and I are off."

"That cannot be; five hundred with Nelly, if you like. The others are not half so handsome, and must have a fortune, or I shall never get them off."

"No; my resolution is fixed," replied the young gentleman; "and I shall not alter my mind."

"Nor I mine," said the parson, "and the affair is at an end; but we will be good friends notwithstanding."

The conversation, which each speaker supposed to be strictly private, now fell into another channel. The ladies returned with the tea-urn, and chatted unreservedly with the farmer. Evening came on, and toward sun-set, the girls having strolled into the garden, the youth rose to take his leave. He found his mug in the stable, and having bade farewell to his host, took his way through the shrubbery that led to the road. He was about alighting to open the gate, when the rosy-faced Nelly darted forward to save him the trouble. As she lit the latch, she looked archly up into his face and said :

"Can't you take my father's money?"

"Yes, by Jove I will if you wish it."

"Then come over to church to-morrow morning, and tell him so after service; and he will be satisfied."

Then Adam, with his wife, and their children lifted up their faces, and thanked God and prayed, and his eye glistened and his countenance shone, and he said—"The Lord is gracious and his mercy endures for ever."

The Potato.

A few months ago we published an account of the introduction of this vegetable from New England, by some persons from Ireland. In 1732 they were sold here at twelve shillings a bushel, a sum sufficient to procure two cords of wood. They are mentioned in the old account books as "potatoes." They were so great a novelty that they are mentioned in many of the diaries which have been preserved. In 1737, Rev. Thomas Smith, of Portland, says in his diary, "there is not a peck of potatoes in the whole eastern country!"

Their introduction into general use was slow, and a hundred years ago, should any person have raised so large a quantity as five bushels, great would have been the inquiry among his neighbors, in what manner he could dispose of such an abundance. Snow no signs of going behind hand and all will go well with you."

"Very true, Uncle Joshua, but how is this to be done?" bills which I did not expect to meet for the next three months, are pouring in upon me. My best customers are leaving me for a more fortunate rival. In short I am on the brink of ruin, and nought but a miracle can save me."

"A miracle which is very easy wrought, I imagine, my good friend. What is the
